Rustic Ridge Roads Have Been Improved

The Rustic Ridge Association for the past two years have made generous appropriations for the improvement of the roads on the hill and Rustic Way was the first thoroughfare to be graded, widened and completed. Now Wood Way and Mountain Road have been likewise graded, widened and completed. It is a splendid improvement appreciated by those who travel the hillside and is an evidence that the summer colony of Northfield have faith in the future of their property holdings and that the prospects of greater interest are evident. The farm department of Northfield Seminary did the work.

Orange To Have Post Office Building

President Frank A. Howe of the Orange National bank received word last Thursday from Congressman Foss that Orange had been allocated the sum of $72,000 for the building of a new postoffice. Mr. Howe has taken much interest and done considerable work toward procuring favorable action by the postoffice department through Congressman Foss, who has also contributed time and effort to bring this about.

Rev. Mary Andrews Conner of Northfield delighted the members of the All Souls Branch Alliance at Greenfield last week at a meeting with her address on "Unexpected By-ways in Europe."

There is some talk here of the organization of a local branch of the National Economy League, an association formed to combat the waste and unnecessary expenditures of Federal, State and Local governments. A Gill Woman Raises White Mice A Business Effort

In Gill an odd industry is being carried on by a well-known woman a college graduate with a nurse's training and a World-war record in the hospitals on the western front. Starting a year ago with two male and eight female breeding mice, she has shipped hundreds of the little rodents for distribution to laboratories where serum and other remedies for ailments of the respiratory tract and organs are prepared and tested. That is the principal commercial use to which white mice are put.

White mice, it seems, will breed when six weeks old, but will have healthier offsprings if bred when two or three months old. Instead. They breed naturally about once a month, though they often mate within 24 hours after bearing young. Five to nine comprise an average litter though some litters contain as many as 12, which is the nursing capacity of the female mouse.

When two weeks old, they are taken from their mothers, segregated by parentage and sex and put upon a diet of grain, stale bread and green stuff. Unlike most animals when weaned, they thrive immensely on the abrupt change from milk to such a coarse diet and their growth is rapid. Some milk is still fed them, as well as salt and butter in small quantities for the sake of health. Their favorite delicacy, however, is cold boiled potato.

With respect to habits, they are, it seems, a source of endless interest and amusement. At the first attempt to take a young mouse from its mother, it will make a frog-like jump in any direction open to it, an instinctive leap for life that may land it on the kitchen floor several feet away. The mother, too, resents the interference and may bite severely, though when her mouse is older she looks upon it merely as another competitor in the struggle for existence.

Shipments of mice are made at monthly intervals, as explained. During the past eight months, 458 mice, offsprings of the original eight females, have been shipped from the Gill farmhouse where they are raised. According to some authorities, this is only three-fourths of the number which should have been produced.

Mice present many problems both in rearing and in shipment. They are sensitive to gases, such as coal gas from hot-air heating plants, a fact employed to good advantage in the World war when rats were used as gas detectors in the trenches. They catch cold easily in transit, whether shipped in summer or in winter. Distributors present another problemavoring of a "racket," in that they will pay only for perfect specimens. In spite of all precautions, only about a third reach their destination in perfect shape. What becomes of the rejected mice on which no payment is made seems to be a mystery. They must display perfect coats and be in possession of their various members, including ears and tails. Mice with wheezy respiratory organs, or symptoms of the "clicks" (pneumonia) will not be accepted.

To get the mice ready for such rigid inspection requires great care in raising and handling. Cages must be sanitized once a week. Clean litter must be provided daily. Feeding dishes must be sterilized. It takes a lot of work to raise hundreds of mice to the shipping age of eight weeks and weight of three-quarters of an ounce. — Orange Enterprise-Journal.

Shear Nonserae

Jack: What is the difference between capital and labor?
Fred: Well, suppose I loaned you five dollars. That is capital.
Jack: And what is labor?
Fred: Getting it back.

Professor Panter of the University of Dublin, Ireland, gives these pithy characterizations. The wit of them we feel robs them of any of sense.

An Irishman is a man who doesn't know what he wants, but won't be happy until he gets it.

A Welshman is a man who prays on his knees on Sunday, and on his neighbors the rest of the week.

A Scotchman is a man who keeps the Sabbath and everything else he can lay his hands on.

An Englishman is a man who travels abroad and calls the natives foreigners.

EDITORIAL

A serious responsibility rests on parents whose sons and daughters, under the age of 20, drive automobiles. It is their duty to impress upon budding men and women the vital necessity for care, courtesy and obedience to traffic rules at all times.

The most dangerous age for drivers is under 20, according to E. E. Robinson Secretary of the National Bureau of Casualty & Surety Underwriters. Out of every thousand drivers under the age of 20 last year, 39 were involved in accidents. From 20 to 29, 36 drivers out of one thousand had mishaps; there were 27 in the ages of 30 to 39; twenty in the ages of 40 to 49 and 18 out of one thousand in the ages of 50 and over.

Automobile public liability and property damage insurance rates are wholly under the control of their policyholders. Stock casualty companies have established by statistics that the record for drivers under 20 last year was 39 per cent worse than the average; from 20 to 29 it was 29 per cent worse; from 30 to 39, 3.6 per cent better than the average; from 40 to 49 it was 29 per cent better and in the ages of 50 and over, 36 per cent better than the average. In the ages under 30, accident experience was 64.7 per cent worse than among the drivers beyond that age.

There were 26,410 drivers under the age of 18 involved in accidents, of which 1,270 were in fatal accidents and 25,140 in non-fatal accidents. From 18 to 24 there were 326,690 drivers in accidents which killed 13,000 persons and injured 313,690.

If parents will constantly emphasize to their children the necessity for safe driving and obedience to traffic regulations, it will be reflected in a diminishing toll of deaths, injury and property damage now exacted by the motor car on streets and highways.

Judging from reports "better times" are on the way. The job ahead is to keep them coming. Action is needed to hasten the ultimate arrival.

Many more men must be put to work so they can buy the food and clothing their families need. And it must be done with less than the normal amount of money. The desired result can be accomplished by adopting a policy of devoting our public and private funds to that class of work, repairs and improvements which call for man and woman labor at a fair price. Northfield citizens who have not felt the "pinch" of the depression may be relied upon to do their part.

With the air filled with election atmosphere, no one can get away from the fact that within a few weeks we shall be privileged to vote our choice for the leadership of the nation. The man now in office as our President, Herbert Hoover, has led the highest honest effort has saved us from a far more disastrous condition than that into which we plunged. Herbert Hoover is a tried and trusted leader and with his background of experience no man should seriously consider for a moment any effort to supplant him with one who like a child crying for something he should not have, wouldn't know what to do with it, if he had it.

Prominent Mason Dies

The death is announced of Mr. Leon M. Abbott of Boston who at one time held the highest honors in Masonry in America. Mr. Abbott's name was always in the minds of all Masons because of his achievements and the Masons of Northfield also know of him as a real friend and brother. As Grand Master of the State he dedicated the Masonic Temple on Parker Street.

Death Of Father

Mr. Joseph E. Ross was called to Greenfield by the death of her father, Mr. William Spencer Clark who died at his home on Conway Street of a heart attack last Sunday at the age of 85 years. He was a prominent member of the Northfield Masonic Lodge, No. 102, and was a member of the Northfield Masonic Temple. His funeral was held last Tuesday at the First Congregational Church in Greenfield and buried was in Granby.

Poet's Corner

A FRIEND OR TWO

There's all of pleasure and all of peace
In a friend or two;
And all your troubles may find release
With a friend or two;
It's in the grip of the clasping hand
On native soil or in alien land.
But the world is made — do you understand?
Of a friend or two.

A song to sing and a crust to share
With a friend or two;
A smile to give and a grief to bear
With a friend or two;
A road to walk and a goal to win,
An inglenook to find comfort in,
The gladdest hours that we know,
Begin
With a friend or two.

A little laughter; perhaps some tears
With a friend or two;
The days, the weeks, and the months and years
With a friend or two;
A vale to cross and a hill to climb,
A mock at age and a jeer at time.
The prose of life takes the lilt of rhyme
With a friend or two.

The brother-soul and the brother-heart
Of a friend or two
Make us drift on from the crowd apart
With a friend or two;
For come days happy or come days sad
We count no hours but the ones made glad
By the hale good times we have ever had
With a friend or two.

Then brim the goblet and quaff the toast
To a friend or two.
For glad the man who can always boast
Of a friend or two;
The fairest sight is a friendly face,
The blithest tread is a friendly pace,
And heaven will be a better place
For a friend or two.
Wilbur D. Nesbit.

MIGHT BE WORSE

"When y' get up in the mornin'
With an ugly sort o' grouch,
Forgettin' all th' pleasant dreams
That hovered 'round yer couch,
When y'd like t' kill yer neighbor,
An' upset th' world that is;
An' put yer brother merchant
Man completely out of biz—
Just remember, you're an atom in
This great big universe
An' thank yer Lord that you're Alive—conditions might be worse."
ANON.

THE VILLAGE BELL

I am the soul of the village,
I am the ancient bell.
If my brazen tongue were loosened,
What history I could tell!
For centuries I have hung here
In this old church tower high.
I have rung and clanged, tolled
and chimed,
As the stream of life flowed by.
I warned of the lurking Indian,
And rang a sharp alarm,
Calling the waiting minute men
From village and from farm.
The noon bell spoke of dinner
time,
Told man and beast to rest.
Gladly the laborers ceased their toil
To eat with song and jest.
Many listened with bated breath,
When I began to toll.
The age and sex of one first passed
To the place of departed souls.
And when the funeral cortege passed
From home to church yard near,
My solemn dirge again would sound
Until they lowered the bier.
At nine o'clock the curfew rang,
Summoning wanderers home,
Unless some gay event took place,
Then youth and maid might roam.
I fiercely clanged in terror,
As fire sought to destroy
But when a wedding party passed
I rang with tender joy.
And when the strife of war had ceased
I sang triumphant tones
For wives' and mothers' great relief,
For men returning home.
On Sabbath days I call to prayer,
My message goes across the hills,
And chimes, a balm for tired
hearts,
The quiet valley fills.
So I have kept the records long,
While the people come and go,
Of how they live, and love, and die.
All of these things I know.
Hearts have been cheered by my ringing,
And many have mourned at my knell.
I am the soul of the village,
I am the ancient bell.

(The part played by the village bell in the lives of the people is described in "The History of Deerfield" Vol. II.)

The Boy With The Gold Spoon

Of course it is to be expected that a lot of silly chatter and foolish indictments must creep into every national political campaign. The silliest thing that the Democrats have pulled in this campaign is the effort to brand Herbert Hoover as disqualified for the job because he is a rich man. If Herbert Hoover is not good presidential timber because of his personal wealth, then Franklin Roosevelt is a positive menace. He is rich.

Hoover was born in pinching poverty in the little town of West Branch, Iowa, where every home is humble. No less than Lincoln, Hoover came from the common people, a people Franklin Roosevelt never knew. His mother never knew what it was to lend a cup of sugar to a needy neighbor. Hoover's mother did.

Franklin Roosevelt was born with a gold spoon in his mouth and he has never had that gold spoon out of his mouth. Unlike his distinguished kinsman, Roosevelt, who was likewise born affluent and of the once catalogued "four hundred," Franklin Roosevelt never went west to know the plainmen. To him the man with a hoe is a picture in the art museum.

To Franklin Roosevelt the village blacksmith is a nursery poem. But Hoover knew him. He was a breadbox fellow. Hoover knows the music of the anvil, the wheeze of the bellows. He can now measure the white iron's yield to the hammer's fall. And Franklin Roosevelt knows nothing of these things.

Franklin Roosevelt was a very nice rich man's boy. Sure he was, and that was all right. He was very well dressed in his pinstripes and Lord Fauntleroy velvet suits with broad starched collars, neatly iron ruffled edges. But even a rich man may become a great President if he learns how to play fair and demand a square deal.

It is all fine and proper and praiseworthy for a Harvard trained youth of great wealth to seek to serve the people. But such a youth becomes a cheap little Lord Fauntleroy when, without his rebuke, his supporters condemn his opponent for having what the rich boy himself has in excess.

As a child Herbert Hoover entertained himself with sticks and tacks strings wires and nails and the assortment of things the village smithy leaves scattered in the shade of the spreading chestnut tree. Franklin Roosevelt played with imported toys under the tutelage and protection of a governess, or nurse, which is the nicer term. Poor grace to point the finger of scorn at Hoover and call him "rich."

Herbert Hoover went to the country school. They say he was a rather shy, diffident child, for even there he sensed that most of his playmates, all from humble homes, were protected by fathers who were affluent compared to the kindly uncle who guarded the orphan.

Franklin Roosevelt went where rich boys go to Groton, the most exclusive preparatory school in America. Then he went to another rich man's school, Harvard. With his small savings Hoover got in Stanford. By laundry work and otherwise he got every nickle that took him through. He graduated with the pioneer class.

Herbert Hoover came from the plain people and he has always loved them as Lincoln did. Hoover's acceptance speech last August 12 will go down into history as one of the greatest spiritual pronouncements of any American President. It was full of human tenderness. It was not a "rich man's" utterance. It was character.

Herbert Hoover has assumed great responsibilities. He has been a great humanitarian and as President of the United States he has held fast to his firm faith that the American people are sufficient unto themselves and will triumph over any world catastrophe.

While others, like barking terriers, have been yipping and snapping with criticism but without the shadow of a creative idea, Hoover has stood like the faithful and trusted pilot that he is on the bridge of our ship of State. He has charted our course through the spray and wash of restless waters. And it is Hoover and not his critics who is now bringing us safely back into the placid waters of prosperity's port.

Let us look at these two boys, one born in the pinch of poverty and the other with a gold spoon in his mouth. One got a Bachelor of Arts degree, with his father's help, from Harvard and then an LL.B. from Columbia. The other got a Bachelor of Arts degree without even a father to help him. Then he engaged in the profession of engineering, planning designing and promoting great wealth-producing enterprises which gave him international fame and netted him to date a personal fortune generously estimated at $750,000, but a fractional part of the fortune Franklin Roosevelt possesses, which he never made, just inherited. From his very rich mother he will inherit a lot more.

Hoover has accepted no decorations since he became President of the United States. But his achievements before brought him degrees from Brown University, the University of Pennsylvania, Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Princeton, Johns Hopkins, George Washington, Dartmouth, Rutgers, University of Alabama, Oberlin, Kennesaw, Tufts, Swarthmore, Williams and little Cornell college so near to the place of his birth in Iowa. Besides these recognitions the following European universities have decorated him with high degrees, Karlsruhe, Liege, Brussels, Warsaw, Cracow, Oxford, Manchester, Prague, Ghent and Lemberg.

All told, with the help of a wealthy father, Franklin Roosevelt has acquired, through honest and credible academic effort two college degree decorations, while the orphan boy, Herbert Hoover, rose in life to receive degrees from eighteen American universities and ten European universities, twenty-eight academic embellishments against two. That's where Herbert Hoover's wealth is found. The wealth of creative intelligence, of human service, the wealth of intellect, the wealth of human experience and sympathy.

The fact is Franklin Roosevelt was born in the lap of luxury. No disgrace. But something of a handicap. And the Democrats are simply dishonest who criticize Hoover for everything that he is not and for everything that Franklin Roosevelt is. Franklin Roosevelt did not make himself rich and he never made anybody else rich. Out of abject poverty Herbert Hoover built up his own economic security and he made it possible for many to honestly make money. And that is the kind of presidential stuff we need right now.

Franklin Roosevelt never knew what it was to make and maintain a pay roll. He never knew what it was to respond to the factory whistle or to say cheerily, "Hi, Bill!" to a co-worker in overalls. He never knew the tenderness and bond of sympathy that stand by a comrade in industry in a humble home and hope for a fellow worker's stricken child.

Franklin Roosevelt came from, and he is of that social class that demands dividends by telegraph and delivers responsibility by ox cart. Now let's measure this ridiculous statement that the Democrats are trying to bolster up with the crutches of falsehood. Let's see how avaricious is this man's mind whom Democrats tell us is interested only in money getting.

When the war was over Hoover had an opportunity to join the Guggenheims on a contract which would have made him a million dollars a year. Such a contract was never tendered for the talents of Lord Fauntleroy Roosevelt. But Hoover did not accept this luring offer. He chose instead to stay in public service, to serve mankind, to be a humanitarian, to be a public servant without pretensions or dramatics. He is a President who is on the job. He is a worker. He never knew the taste of a gold spoon. And you Democrats can't put the gold spoon in Herbert's mouth. It won't fit.

He only is rich who understands and helps.—Robert Collyer.

County Republican

Conference A Success

The luncheon conference of the Franklin County Auxiliary Committee of the Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts which was held at the home of the Chairman, Mrs. Wolfert Webber was most successful. Perfect weather made Saturday, the eighth, ideal for motoring, and the town representatives came from far and wide to lunch together, and discuss local problems of getting out the vote. Discussion was general and stimulating. By comparison of local methods, many helpful new ideas were gained.

Mrs. Arthur D. Potter of Greenfield welcomed the committee members, who represented seventeen towns, as far apart as Hawley, Charlemont, New Salem, Orange. She extended an invitation to all to bring large delegations to the Republican Reception at her home on the afternoon of October 20th, and to the Republican Rally in Washington Hall that same evening.

Miss Katherine V. Parker, President of the Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts, was present, and gave much helpful advice in response to the questions that arose in the discussion. Her final appeal, before the adjournment was most inspiring, and was a challenge to every woman present to consider herself the means of establishing contact between every voter and President Hoover.

Response was received from twenty three towns, and the following towns were represented by their members of this committee: Bernardston, Buckland, Charlemont, Colrain, Conway, Deerfield, Erving, Gill, Greenfield, Hawley, Leyden, Montague, New Salem, Northfield, Orange, Shelburne, Sunderland. From this widespread response to the call to conference, we are assured of active, enthusiastic campaign work for the Republican cause in Franklin County.

Pulaski Day was observed by many citizens last Tuesday and President Hoover issued a proclamation in honor of the day and in memory of that Polish patriot Gen. Casimir Pulaski, nobleman and Revolutionary war patriot.

The day marked the 153d anniversary of Gen. Pulaski's death in 1779, when he was mortally wounded in battle near Savannah. The son of a Polish nobleman, under whom he started his military activities, Pulaski was driven to exile in 1772. Five years later he came to America and joined Washington's forces. He distinguished himself at Brandywine, and at the order of Congress was made a brigadier-general and chief of cavalry.

Pulaski assembled a mixed corps, called the Polish legion, with which he won a decisive battle in May, 1779. The following October he was mortally wounded.

The Winchester Republican club has been re-organized with the following officers:

Walter Nutting, president; Frank P. Kellom, vice president; Rachael Partridge, secretary; W. E. Burbank, treasurer.

A. F. Pierce, Earle Jones, Maurice Partridge, J. R. Donovan, Richard Hayes, Mrs. W. B. Drugg, Mrs. O. B. Pierce, executive committee. They will serve for the ensuing four years.

This town has a check list of 1030 names. In presidential elections the voting power of Winchester has been known to turn out 100 percent. This year will be no exception, it is predicted, as both the presidential and senatorial issues will be hotly contested.

Winchester is being re-appraised Wednesday, A. P. Fitch, representing the State Tax commission, arrived in town and under the guidance of the selectmen, began the task of reauditing the valuations on taxable property. This will take many days, it is expected.

New interest is aroused in local politics by the announcement of a re-organization meeting of the Republican club.

Political enthusiasm has lately lagged here. Recent primary, however, served to stir the situation up.

Another 4-H club has been formed here. The project is to the credit of Miss Helena Sullivan, teacher of the district school at Scotland, who saw material plenty in the many young girls of that populous little hamlet.

The High School magazine "The Thayer Review" will make its first 32-33 appearance on Nov. 4. The cover will carry a picture of the high school, taken specially for the new editors. The paper's staff is as follows: Editor, Wayne Grupe; assistant editor, Paul Buchanan; news editor, Evelyn Johnson; baseball editor, W. Grupe; soccer editor, G. Jennings; class reporters: senior, Wayne Grupe, Evelyn Johnson; junior, Paul Buchanan, Chauncey Weeks; sophomore, Eunice Hamilton, Ralph Nelson; freshman, William Felch, Ted Stearns.

C. Fred Slate, lifelong resident and prominent business man died at his home here early Wednesday, October 5th after a long illness.

Mr. Slate was born in Hinsdale, March 14, 1871, the son of Charles E. and Jennie (Putnam) Slate. When he was six months old his parents moved to Winchester, and the deceased has lived here ever since, with the exception of some time spent in Atlanta, Ga.

Mr. Slate entered business six years ago, when he purchased the haberdashery business of George Hutchins on Main Street, continuing the management of the store until his death.

A gifted musician, Fred Slate was a member of the American Association of Musicians. He was also a Mason, and a member of the Universalist Church of this town. The deceased is survived by a brother, John Slate, and by a sister, Daisy P. Slate, both of this town.

The funeral was held Friday afternoon from the Universalist Church, Rev. George T. Carl officiating. Services at the grave were in charge of the Masons.

A Live Fox In Merchants Window

The store of Mr. Arthur P. Lawrence in the Proctor Block has recently been repainted and decorated and a new arrangement made of the lighting. He is also redecorating and repainting his show windows. Many persons stop on the outside to look in. A real live fox may be seen and creates some considerable interest. However this fox is not of the wild or fur bearing kind and he is thoroughly domesticated.

Now that you may not be disappointed, we would say that the fox in the window is not an animal at all but our active fellow townsman, who is both a carpenter and a painter. Mr. Fred Fox—and he is the fox who is doing a splendid piece of work in the window of Mr. Lawrence's store.

Scientists Play With Fireballs To Discover Perfect Heating

MILLIONS of flaming balls of fire, no larger than a pin point, have been studied to develop better understanding of the principles of combustion and heating by the scientists of the Petro-Nokol research laboratory at Stamford, Conn. Computations on these minute shooting stars involving the abstract mathematics of calculus have developed information which has enabled engineers to design heating equipment having double the efficiency of that prevailing a decade ago.

The efficient utilization of fuel oil is the single problem studied by the scientists at the Petro-Nokol research laboratory, and although that task might seem prosaic to the layman, the work there is interesting and replete with romance. In their study of the burning of fuel oil, the scientists found that when the oil is atomized each globule of oil burns in a manner similar to that of peeling off the layers of an onion. First the outer surface of the oil globule burns off, then another layer of the oily sphere, which gradually becomes smaller as it travels through the combustion chamber. The research experts found that for balanced combustion the particles of oil must not be too small or too big when they enter the combustion chamber of the furnace.

The problem was to make each traveling ball of fire, as represented by each tiny globule of oil, to keep on glowing in its journey clear across the combustion chamber. When this happens it sets up a thermal reaction and gives off what scientists call radiant energy (identical with that found in sunshine). The more radiant heat that can be extracted from a fuel, the more efficient is the heating result. If the particles of oil, entering the combustion chamber, are too small, report the scientists of the Petro-Nokol research laboratory, the fiery ball dies too soon, and much radiant heat is lost. If the oil globules are over-size, the inner part will not burn completely and faulty and wasteful combustion results.

The speed of the tiny balls of oil, their diameters, the length of time they are glowing, and many other conditions are studied in order that the highest perfection will be brought to automatic oil heating—a triumph of modern science that now brings comfort and warmth to more than three-quarters of a million families in the United States.

Anecdotes a la Rector

BALL-ROOM ACROBATICS

By GEORGE RECTOR

A RESTAURANT man is in a position to see many unusual sights. Every day at Rector's brought me laughter—not out and out guffaws, mind you, but inward chuckles which had to be restrained, no matter at what cost.

I remember a Bridal dinner given in the main ball-room of Rector's. The guests were all social registerites, and they certainly let you know it. Such prim and sedate folks you never did see. Loggnettes were raised on the slightest provocation, and the gentlemen did not forget that they came in wearing high silk hats.

Even the rice-throwing was done with an air of propriety; but because of the number of people in the party, rice was all over the ball-room floor. This, by the way, was one of the Rector's special features, being made of an imported wood, specially prepared, waxed and polished. And how it shone!

Well, as I said before, rice was all over the floor. The orchestra began to play a Strauss waltz. Dignified dowagers and courtly gentlemen began to dance. Then the fun began! You should have seen the acrobatic exhibition which took place on that floor. I mean that literally. On the floor they were, every couple of them heels and petticoats were flying in the air, and what screams and shouts went up! Imagine a 60-year-old dowager whirling across a dance floor, her bewildered partner hanging on for dear life and then teetering out from underneath them. At least a dozen people were trying to get up from the floor, and as soon as they stood up, down again they went. Please don't think that all we used rice for at Rector's was to throw at Brides or to make floors slippery. Try this "a la Rector" recipe which I have simplified in the "Our Daily Food" radio experimental kitchen. I think that you will agree with me that rice is far better suited to culinary boards than to dance floors.

Ham Risotto
1 cup diced ham (any kind)
2 cups boiled rice
2 cups canned tomatoes, finely minced
1 teaspoon dried onion
Cook the green peppers in the broth for five minutes. Add the tomato, onion and cooked rice. Bring to a boil and add the diced ham. Risotto is to be served moist but not watery, so if there is much liquid reduce it with a few minutes of cooking. Season with dash of Worcestershire, salt, pepper and paprika. Place a piece of butter on each serving.

Cookies for Ever-Hungry Youngsters

Home-made Goodies Delight Kiddies

SCHOOL days again and hungry youngsters racing home and asking for "something good" to eat. If the cookie jar is kept well filled, mother will have no difficulty in satisfying the children, because these little cakes are substantial enough to satisfy the between-meal craving and still so "light" they will not spoil the appetite for regular meals.

While even plain cookies will appeal to nearly all children, try giving them something with a flavor they like. Cut the cookies in interesting shapes, such as stars, diamonds, and little animals! Or decorate the top of plain cookies with some nuts, raisins, or small colored candies, and listen to the shouts of delight.

Add these to the school lunch, too, and watch the interest of the youngsters in that rather difficult meal.

Chocolate Cookies

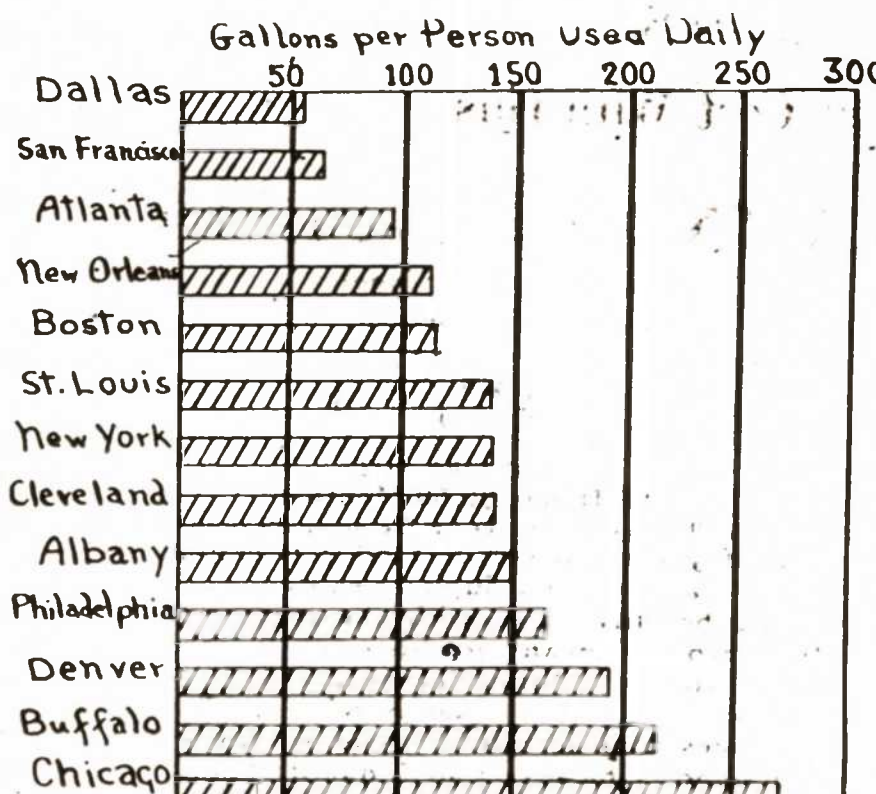

2½ cups sifted cake flour
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
½ cup butter or other shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
1 tablespoon cream
Sift flour once, measure, add cinnamon, baking powder, and soda, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, chocolate, and cream, and beat well. Add flour, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Chill until firm enough to roll. Roll into thin sheet on slightly floured board. Cut with floured cookie cutters as desired. Dredge with sugar, or decorate with nuts, shredded coconut, small colored candies, colored sugars, or dried fruits (raisins, currants, and thin slices citron). Place on ungreased baking sheet and bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 9 minutes. Makes 2½ dozen large cookies.

Chocolate Drop Cookies

2 cups sifted cake flour
½ teaspoon soda
dash of salt
½ cup butter or other shortening
½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1 egg, well beaten
3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup walnut meats, broken
Sift flour once, measure, add soda and salt, and sift together twice. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Add chocolate and blend. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla and nuts. Drop from teaspoon on greased baking sheet and bake in moderate oven (350° F.) about 10 minutes. Frost with chocolate butter frosting if desired. Makes 50 cookies.

Use of Water in U. S. Cities

DAILY use of water per person shows wide variation in America, according to Swart, Brent & Co., Inc., of New York City, specialists in waterworks securities. Chicago, as shown on the accompanying chart, uses a daily average of 270 gallons for every man, woman and child. The daily per capita consumption in Dallas, Texas, on the other hand, is 59 gallons.

Waterworks securities now occupy an extremely favorable position among the utilities, Swart, Brent & Co. points out, saying because of the cheapness of water there is little incentive on the part of the public to cut down on its use of water during hard times. Earnings of waterworks for this reason have been maintained above the level of other utilities in the last few years.

Farmers Can Cut Acreage In Half and Make More Money

THE American farmer can cut his acreage in half and by intensive cultivation of the soil through the intelligent use of fertilizer he can double his profits, according to Horace Bowker, president of the American Agricultural Chemical Company, speaking at a meeting in New York City. With modern farm methods, said Mr. Bowker, the adequate use of fertilizer of the right type increases the yield from each acre planted and reduces by as much as 50% the cost of growing each pound of cotton or bushel of wheat.

"Failure to understand the true function of fertilizer is one of the principal reasons why fertilizer consumption has shown such a relatively slow rate of increase in this country," Mr. Bowker continued. "This is evidenced by the fact that farmers in Europe, under similar climatic conditions, employ fertilizer at from three to ten times the rate which obtains in this country."

"This inadequate understanding of the part played by fertilizer in reducing unit production costs acutely affects the fertilizer industry whenever the farmer's buying power is impaired, as witness the situation in the current year, with consumption at a rate less than half that of 1929. Yet," Mr. Bowker pointed out, "by using the proper fertilizer to increase the yield from each acre planted, it is possible to reduce the cost of growing a pound of cotton from an average of, say, 12 cents a pound to 4 or 5 cents a pound, and the same is true of other crops as well. Obviously, then, in times like these the farmer needs fertilizer more than ever."

Realization of the farmer's misunderstanding of what fertilizer really does for him, superimposed on all the other problems of present-day marketing, caused a leading sales executive to call the job of selling fertilizer "the nation's toughest marketing problem."

"It is a 'tough' problem," Mr. Bowker stated, "but it is my experience that facts, properly applied, are a solvent for any normal problem. To obtain the facts with which to correct the misconception under which our product has been laboring, the American Agricultural Chemical Company set to work in 1930 on a three-year fact-finding program. The facts developed pertaining to cotton during 1931 will serve to give a fair picture of the situation in respect to other crops as well.

"The 1931 cotton crop as a whole was grown at a record-breaking low average cost estimated at 12 cents a pound, compared with an average cost of 16 cents for the preceding two years."

"It is important to compare this unusually low countrywide average production cost of 12 cents a pound with the cost of growing cotton where the crop was adequately fertilized. Our 1931 cotton crop-cost projects included 165 one-acre plots, distributed throughout the Cotton Belt. 132 of these plots were adequately fertilized, while 33 were unfertilized," continued Mr. Bowker.

"The 132 fertilized plots yielded cotton at an average cost of 64 cents per pound of lint. The lowest cost was 43 cents a pound and the highest 72 cents."

"The other words, our field tests show that the national average production cost of 12 cents a pound (probably the lowest in a generation) was just about double what it should be."

"This difference between a production cost of 12 cents and 64 cents a pound is primarily due to the difference in yield per acre. Compared with the national average yield of 2001 pounds of lint per acre, the 132 fertilized plots included in our field research work yielded an average of 410 pounds—or more than double the countrywide average."

"A 105 per cent higher yield per acre means a 47 per cent decrease in per pound production cost. Yield per acre," Mr. Bowker concluded, "is thereby shown to be a determining factor in unit production cost and therefore of crop profit."

Moderate Exercise and Sensible Salad Diet Protect Joan Crawford, Lovely Screen Star

LIFE isn't always just a bowl of cherries for movie stars in Hollywood. To most of them, fame and the applause of millions means more than homes in Beverly Hills or Malibu Beach or the other outward signs of success.

Ask Joan Crawford, lovely Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, what it has meant to reach her present position. She'll tell you about the long, tedious hours on the set, the gruelling routines under the blinding glare of the Klieg lights, and the untold days of work and worry outside the studio.

She'll tell you how she strove to keep herself in perfect physical condition, how much it meant to her to have a glamorous and alluring figure in her parts, and how she worked first to develop herself along those lines and then to preserve her irresistible appeal.

Like many other thousands of girls, Joan's figure is her fortune. She realizes how essential it is to her, and she regulates her diet and her exercise accordingly. But with it all, she's found a woman can be sensible—and still stay slender.

Joan hasn't any use for rubber sheets or exhausting exercises in the gymnasium. She exercises moderately on the tennis court, on the bridge path and in the swimming pool, and considers that sufficient. For she watches her waistline when it comes to food by substituting two salads a day, topped with double-whipped mayonnaise, for the rich foods so many women love so well and can't resist.

Joan Crawford

Salads with Joan are not just a summer dish. Throughout the year, they are the main dish of many of her mid-day and evening meals. And it's no sacrifice, too. Salads are available in so many delicious, irresistible ways, that the slenderizing dish far from being a penalty forms the piece de resistance of her daily menu.

State Will Issue New Book On Birds

The true-to-life colored pictures of birds, which appeared originally in the "Birds of Massachusetts and Other New England States," have just been republished in a single volume under the title "Birds of New England Birds," and may now be had on application to the Secretary of State, State House, Boston. The colored plates are 92 in number, from paintings by the late Louis Agassiz Fuertes, the greatest American bird artist, and by Major Allan Brooks, the outstanding Canadian ornithological painter. There is also one black and white plate by Dr. John B. May, Director of Ornithology of the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture, under whose direction the present volume was prepared. There are 344 species illustrated by over 566 figures, as frequently there are several figures of the same species to show variation due to age, sex or season. As a convenience to bird students, there is an index to the plates, and the names also appear under each plate. A brief foreword by Dr. Arthur W. Gilbert, Massachusetts Commissioner of Agriculture, is a tribute to the memory of Edward Howe Forbush, the author.

Thousands of bird students will value this new book not alone for its outstanding illustrations, but as a reminder of their personal friendship for Mr. Forbush. Like the previous volumes on the "Birds of Massachusetts" this new one of "Portraits of New England Birds" is published by the Commonwealth and is being distributed at cost by the office of the Secretary of State.

CO-STARS WM. POWELL - KAY FRANCIS

A two-fold interest and importance attaches to Warner Bros. "Jewel Robbery," the brilliant Viennese romantic melodrama which opens at the Lawler Theatre next Sunday through Wednesday.

First and foremost, it marks the screen reunion of William Powell and Kay Francis after a lapse of many months.

Secondly, because "Jewel Robbery" has fascinated and amused the theatre-goers of two continents with its wit, its suave, subtle satire, and its gay, polished rascality.

In translating this unusual drama to the screen, Warner Bros. have stopped at nothing to surround their two stars with a perfect cast.

William Powell and Kay Francis are each stars in their own right. Yet so enthusiastic were both, over the leading roles of "Jewel Robbery," that they fairly cheered the suggestion of the production heads of the studio that they co-star in the picture.

Powell is a polished, debonair bandit who gracefully eludes the smartest police agents of Europe.

Kay Francis is the spoiled wife of Vienna's richest banker, whose proud boast it is that no man can give her the thrill that a new jewel affords her. The afternoon that her doting husband is about to pur-

Vinson was brought especially from Broadway for the role of Marianne, after building a brilliant reputation for herself in such productions as "Death Takes a Holiday," "Berlin" and "The Fatal Alibi." Hardie Albright, as Paul, is another Broadway favorite whose outstanding work in "So Big," opposite Barbara Stanwyck led to his important role in this picture.

Henry Kolker, as Baron Franz, has been a familiar figure to metropolitan theatre-goers for thirty years, besides having a long and successful screen record to his credit. Spencer Charters, whose comedy characterizations have won him a unique place on both the stage and screen, is a typical police agent.

In brief but vivid roles are such experienced actors as Lee Kohlmar, Charles Coleman, Andre Luguet, Robert Greig, Clarence Wilson, Leo White, Lawrence Grant, Ivan Linow and Ruth Donnelly.

"Jewel Robbery" is an adaptation of the New York and Vienna success by Ladislav Fodor, done by Edwin Gelsey.

"HEARTS OF HUMANITY"
HAS IMPRESSIVE CAST

An exceptionally impressive cast, headed by Jean Hersholt, one of the screen's foremost character actors, who recently scored opposite Marie Dressler in "Emma," and Jackie Searl, inimitable child actor, will be seen in "Hearts of Humanity," the new Majestic screen drama which comes to the Lawler Theatre for a 4 run next Sunday.

In this gripping story of man's struggle against Fate, from the pen of Olga Printzlau, Jackie plays a little Irish immigrant whose mother perishes on the voyage to America, and whose father, an East Side New York policeman, is shot down in the line of duty a few days before the boat is due to dock.

Jean Hersholt is seen as the kindly old Jewish second-hand dealer, the father's closest friend, who takes the little Irish orphan-immigrant into the bosom of his family.

J. Farrell MacDonald, who recently scored in "The Spirit of Notre Dame" and "The Phantom Express," portrays the murdered policeman. The leading feminine role is played by lovely Claudia Dell, erstwhile Follies Beauty, and the popular Charles Delaney, plays a young policeman who loves her.

Lucille LaVerne, veteran character actress of stage and screen, who made a tremendous hit as the Widow Cagle in the outstanding stage success, "Sun Up" and has for many years been famous for her vivid screen portrayals of toothless hags and harridans with flowing hair, portrays the mother of Claudia Dell and the respectable proprietor of a small cleaning and dying establishment.

John Vosberg, Dick Wallace, Betty Jane Graham, George Humbert and Tom McGuire complete the imposing lineup of players.

Christy Cabanne, director of many recent screen successes, handled the megaphone, while the adaptation and dialogue are the work of Edward T. Lowe.

"Hearts of Humanity" is a moving story of the friendships and struggles between Irishman, Jew, German and Italian in the melting pot of the world, boasting all the tenderness and humor of the "Abie's Irish Rose" and "Cohens and Kellys" type of story, with the added force of tense, powerful, dramatic situations.

AIR PILOT AND HIS FIRST PASSENGER
TOGETHER IN FILM

Ben Lyon Gave Sally Eilers Her First Plane Ride—
Now Playing Opposite Her

Although Ben Lyon and Sally Eilers never worked together in a picture until they made "Hat Check Girl" recently for Fox Films, Ben has good reason to remember the lady—for four years ago she was his first airplane passenger.

At that time the actor-aviator, then working in "Hell's Angels," had just won his private pilot's license and was feeling very proud of his aeronautical ability. The license gave him the right to take up non-paying passengers for a trip, but somehow none of Ben's immediate friends evinced any enthusiasm over his offers to show them California from the air, and some of them even intimated that they preferred to do their flying behind a more experienced pilot.

Sally Eilers happened to come along about that time, however, and being ready to try anything once, she climbed into Lyon's ship and went aloft, with the actor somewhat nervous over his responsibility at the controls. Since that time, both players have become considerably more accustomed to the air, Miss Eilers having flown many hours with her aviator-husband, Hoot Gibson, while Lyon achieved an army pilot's commission and is a lieutenant in the 322d Pursuit Squadron.

Neither does any flying in "Hat Check Girl," however, the story being a speedy romance between a night club girl and a Park Avenue millionaire. Ginger Rogers, Arthur Pierson, Monroe Owsley, Purnell Pratt and other favorites are in the cast of the picture, which comes to the Lawler Theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Ginger Rogers, Ben Lyon and Sally Eilers are the triumvirate of principals in "Hat Check Girl," the new Fox comedy drama of life on the Great White Way. 3PA

Having played to almost as many legitimate theatre audiences as "Uncle Tom's Cabin," Richard Walton Tully's famous play, "Bird of Paradise" has finally reached the talking screen, now playing at the Garden Theatre.

The lovely Dolores Del Rio will be seen in the exotic role of "Luana," created on the stage by Leonore Ulric. Joel McCrea, handsome hero of several of Constance Bennett's recent pictures, heads the supporting cast.

Filmed in Hawaii, this latest RKO-Radio picture is filled with the sensuous beauty of the tropics, and has been given a lavish production by King Vidor, creator of such outstanding pictures as "The Big Parade," "Street Scene" and "The Champ."

One of the episodes particularly praised by critics in metropolitan cities where the film has been shown, is the first native marriage feast ever to be recorded by camera and microphone.

An underwater fight with a shark, the flight of an entire village from the deadly lava of an erupting volcano, and a daring version of the hula, are among the other highlights of "Bird of Paradise."

The love scenes between Dolores and McCrea are said to be especially enchanting, and a beautiful score of native music, running through the entire production, is an added appeal.

The closest approximation of a genuine "million dollar" cast is offered by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in bringing to the talking screen Vicki Baum's sensational novel and stage hit, "Grand Hotel," which will head the program at the Garden Theatre for four days, starting Saturday.

Although definite figures are not available, it is known that Director Edmund Goulding had under his supervision the greatest aggregation of major stars ever assembled before a motion picture camera as a picture cast. What they totalled in salaries cannot be learned, but unofficial estimates agree they outweighed any other talent outlay on record.

As Grusinskaya, the Russian ballerine, there is Greta Garbo, whose last picture, "Mata Hari," broke box-office records throughout the country. Paired with her as Baron von Gaigern, who enters her room to steal jewels but remains to fall in love, is John Barrymore, recognized as the foremost romantic actor of the American stage and screen.

For Sex Appeal

Joan Crawford, another breaker of box-office records, is cast as Flaemmchen, the sex-appealing stenographer who finds that happiness and tragedy often go hand in hand. Wallace Beery essays the most dramatic role of his career as Preysing, the militaristic industrial magnate who trifles with dishonesty and unfaithfulness with dire consequences.

Lionel Barrymore, awarded last year's acting trophy from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, has the grand characterization of Kringlein, a hum-drum factory clerk who registers at the Grand Hotel to enjoy a brief period of splendor before he dies. This is his second appearance with his brother, John, with whom he recently played in "Arsene Lupin."

Stone as Doctor

Lewis Stone as the shell-shocked doctor and Jean Hersholt as the porter who is anxious about the birth of his baby, head the large supporting cast, which includes Robert McWade, Purnell B. Pratt, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Rafaela Ottiano, Morgan Wallace, Tully Marshall, Frank Conroy, Murray Kinnell and Edwin Maxwell. In all, some seventy individual parts are in the picturization of the play, all of them important regardless of brevity.

Against the timely tapestry of adding machines, teller's cages and the intricate paraphernalia of a modern bank, there was unfolded a story at the Garden Theatre, in "American Madness," which entered into the very midst of today's greatest human problem.

It raised a problem, yet it was not a problem picture. Frank Capra, ace director of the Columbia studios, the producers of "American Madness," who is famed for "Ladies of Leisure," "Flight," "Submarine" and "Dirigible," wove his essentially simple theme into and against a huge, complicated background in a manner that makes "American Madness" the finest entertainment of the year.

"American Madness" has force and power. It brings to life the marble pillars, which are the symbol of the nation's great banking institutions; and it makes intelligible the drama that seethes behind the hundreds of doors marked, "Bank President."

Walter Huston without question gives his finest performance since "Abraham Lincoln." No character that he has played since that epic has had the vitality and the moral courage of Tom Dickson, bank president, whose code is character—not collateral. Constance Cummings and Pat O'Brien are excellently cast as two young lovers who are constantly vexed by the problem of getting married on a bank clerk's salary. The characterization which Kay gives as Dickson's wife has warmth and charm. And Gavin Gordon is one of the most convincing "weak heavies" we have yet seen on the screen.

More alluring than ever, KAY FRANCIS plays a new type role in Warner Bros. "Jewel Robbery," in which she is co-starred with WILLIAM POWELL. Prominent in the cast are Hardie Albright, Helen Vinson and Spencer Charters.

chase for her a celebrated diamond, at Vienna's most exclusive jeweler's is the afternoon that "The Robber" has chosen to pay the same jeweler a professional visit.

Even while she is being robbed, the Baroness forgets her passion for precious stones in her admiration for the aristocratic outlaw who so gallantly relieves her of her jewels, as a mere incident to the looting of the shop.

Her heart, she finds to her horror and delight, is irretrievably gone. She finds she has been robbed of more than her jewels.

Done in a mood of romantic whimsicality and daring that lends to every situation pace and sparkle, the story never slows up for a second.

William Dieterle has directed the picture with a suavity and a subtle humor that is in perfect harmony with the elements of the story. The supporting cast of players reveals exceptional strength. Helen

Children Tested In County Towns

Chadwick clinics to detect tuberculosis in school children, are being conducted in the smaller towns of Franklin county.

Preparation for the clinics was begun last spring, when parents and guardians of school children were asked to sign "consent slips," which put the children into the care of the Chadwick clinic for examination. All pupils are given a "skin test," which consists of pressing tuberculin against the cuticle without penetrating it. Children with tuberculous tendencies react to this test, whereupon the physicians in charge of the clinic have a X-ray made to determine whether the disease is actually present. The experience of the clinic is that 28 out of 100 children react to the test and out of this 28 six are usually found to have the disease in the glandular form. All cases requiring treatment are referred to family physicians.

The chief value of the clinic is that it detects the disease while it is in the curable stage and results in the saving of many lives. Few parents may make any objection to the examination, which is limited to the chest and includes only the tuberculin test and the X-ray, the latter being made only after a reaction to the tuberculin is noted.

Local Dealer Reports On Ford Sales

Since June when volume deliveries of the new Ford V-8 cars began, Ford has led all competitors by a wide margin in sales of passenger cars, commercial vehicles and trucks, according to official figures reported today by Mr. Spencer, of Spencer Bros. local Ford dealers.

Ford took the lead in national motor car sales in June, increased his lead in July, as production of the new Fords mounted, and maintained the lead throughout August. In addition Ford led in sales in the largest cities during the first 10 days of September.

In June, the first month when volume deliveries of the new Ford cars were available, Ford's share of total passenger car sales in the United States reached 35.9 per cent, as compared with 24.9 per cent for its nearest competitor. Ford commercial cars were 50.5 per cent of all such vehicles sold, as compared with 37.6 per cent for its nearest competitor, while Ford trucks represented 35.7 per cent of all truck sales, as compared with 27.6 per cent for the nearest competitor.

Ford sales in July, as revealed by official registrations mounted over June figures and Ford's share of the business was increased. Ford passenger car sales reached 38.4 per cent of the total business as compared with 24.2 for its nearest competitor. Ford commercial cars were 54.4 per cent of all cars sold, giving Ford a greater percentage of the total business than all other manufacturers combined. The Ford share of national truck sales was 34.4 per cent, as compared with 27.1 per cent for its nearest competitor.

The reporting of registrations in August in the various states is not complete.

Since volume deliveries of the new Fords began in June, Ford has accounted for 35.3 per cent of all new passenger car sales in Massachusetts as compared with 29.9 per cent for its nearest competitor, Mr. Spencer added. Ford sold 5,479 of the total of 15,533 cars of all makes sold in the state in June, July and August. Ford's total commercial car and truck unit sales were greatly in excess of those of any other manufacturer.

Registration figures show that in Northfield and vicinity Ford has secured 60% of the total new car sales to date, which is remarkable in view of the fact that volume delivery of the Ford only began June first.

Central Vermont's New Fast Freight

The Central Vermont railroad, seeking to improve its freight service, has established a new freight train to be known as "The Rocket." The train is so named from the fact that it provides for speedy delivery to the northern division of all freight shipped out of New York and the southern division stations.

Railroad officials are doing everything possible to facilitate the speedy operation of the train and say that it will live up to the name that has been chosen for it. This train will be seen and heard thundering its way along through Northfield by our people.

PORK BARREL GAME
IN U. S. CONGRESS
IS SELF-DEFENSE

CONGRESSMAN GARNER, AT AT-ASCOSA FAIR, TELLS HOW HE "TIGHTS DEVIL WITH FIRE"

Facsimile of a Texas newspaper clipping reproducing a speech of several years ago by Speaker Jack Garner in which he says every time a Yankee gets a ham from the government, he will get a whole hog for Texas. The clipping was released by the Republican State Committee of Massachusetts.

Speaker Garner Boasts of "Pork Barrel" Policy

The Republican State Committee of Massachusetts today released the text of an address by Speaker John N. Garner in which he openly admitted that he and his Democratic colleagues had put up a $50,000 postoffice in his home town of Uvalde, Texas, "where a $5,000 building would be entirely adequate for our needs." The vice-presidential candidate's words are from a speech he made several years ago, as reported in one of his own state's newspapers.

A facsimile of the clipping was accompanying this statement from the committee: "This speech is eloquent testimony to the economy which we can expect if the Democratic party extends its control of the federal government. John N. Garner is not only a candidate for vice-president. He is the legislative head of his party. The recklessness of his leadership this year in Congress is now well known. This clipping, however, reveals in an even more glaring fashion the brazenness of his political view-point. He openly admits that to win votes he will soak the taxpayers for absurdly unnecessary expenditures. He boasts that he is a star in the 'pork barrel' game."

WARNS OF PERIL
IN ANY CHANGE

Head of Big Food Concern Addresses Business Men and Housewives
A change in administration will destroy the confidence of business men, and the adverse effect will be felt by every purchaser of supplies, declared Edward F. Hutton in a message to New England people engaged in every form of commercial enterprise. As the head of one of the largest food distributing companies in the country he addressed his words also to heads of families and housewives.

"The recovery hinges on confidence," he said, "and confidence is a sensitive thing. Disturb this confidence and your upset not only business, but everything dependent on activity of business and that is everything."

"This confidence centers about the present administration. Change administrations and you change all that. Change administrations and you will slow down all business activities under way, and these constructive operations will suffer a setback. Confidence will give way to doubt, optimism to fear, certainty to uncertainty."

"If we change administrations in November, it will be four months before the new administration goes into office. That means four months of uncertainty for business—four months of standstill government. It means that during this period millions of conservative people—people responsible for the conduct of business large and small—will have to wait until the policies of the incoming administration are made known. And the uncertainty won't end in March. It will be five or six months more before the new administration finds itself and satisfies the men who direct business, just what those policies are going to be. Put that altogether and you have almost a year of uncertainty."

"We have lived somehow, through three years of just such conditions and we're just emerging from it. Those three years were nobody's fault, in particular. We were caught in the vortex of a storm that almost uprooted civilization. But this next year—if it happens—will be our fault."

FINDS JOBS FOR A MILLION MEN

Service Halted as Hoover Measure Placed 30,000 in Massachusetts

Nearly 30,000 men have been sent to work by the federal employment offices in Massachusetts in the short period since most of these agencies have come into existence, according to a report released today by Walter C. Conroy, state director of employment for the United States department of labor. Placements by other agencies working in co-operation with this service, and all functioning without charging a fee to the men and women for whom they find jobs, bring the grand total to nearly three times that number.

Director Conroy describes this work of the employment service which is hitting at the heart of the depression as one of the outstanding achievements of President Hoover and the present administration in Washington. The President and Secretary of Labor William N. Doak, he declared, gave new life to the federal employment service, saving millions of dollars to people out of work and at the same time rendering a high service to industrial and business executives, through a service free of charge both to the wage earner and employer.

The United States employment service, according to figures announced by Conroy, succeeded in placing 1,276,550 persons in gainful employment from April 1, 1931, to June 30, 1932. Its branches are now functioning in every state in the Union.

Director Conroy's report continued: "In addition to this, co-operative arrangements with other federal employment services conducted by the states, the municipalities and other civic agencies, have been more widely encouraged and greatly extended. Reports from Washington show that in the same period, the free public employment offices operated under co-operative arrangement with the federal government, found work opportunities for 1,263,320 persons. The grand total of placements made directly by the offices of the United States employment service and the other agencies working with them reached the sum of 2,539,870 men and women."

"The placements in Massachusetts up to June 30 totaled 29,446. Placements made by other employment offices in this state conducted by the Commonwealth, several municipalities, and other civic agencies which were the recipients of federal aid and co-operation from the United States employment service under the established form of co-operative relationship, reached the total of 78,182 persons. Included in that figure were placements made by the Boston emergency committee on unemployment. The combined total, direct and indirect, from April 1, 1931, to June 30, 1932, was 107,628."

"Federal employment offices are functioning successfully in Fall River, Lawrence, Lowell and Pittsfield. Plans are being made for further expansion of the service in addition to dealing directly with immediate problems of getting jobs for individual applicants and their families, the staffs are following up on all industrial and business activities in their localities and are constantly abreast of the times and in a position to reap the advantage of being posted where opportunities for employment exist or are likely to develop. These officials go out into the field each day and make personal contacts with employers, to acquaint them with the facilities our service has to offer. Contacts are made and cultivated with organized labor, chambers of commerce, manufacturers and trade associations, veterans' organizations, civic organizations and public officials. The registration lists embrace all classes of workers from the laborer to professional man."

Two spinsters were discussing men. "Which would you desire most in a husband—brains, wealth or appearance?" asked one. "Appearance," snapped the other, "and the sooner the better."

Treadway's Estimate Of Hoover Speech

Congressman Treadway was recently interviewed in regard to his impressions of President Hoover's recent speech at Des Moines. He evidenced a feeling of complete satisfaction and said:

"The President's simile of fighting a war in time of peace and winning a victory must be plain to every listener over the radio to his wonderful address at Des Moines. His answer to his opponent was thrilling and complete. His explanation was clear and concise. "Such a straightforward statement is not a political speech but an account of his stewardship to the people. When read at the firesides of the country a long step will be taken toward Mr. Hoover's re-election. He not only explains the administration attitude on great subjects but hits plainly at Democratic weaknesses. I hope this is the first of a series of speeches that the President will make during the next five weeks. Such reports direct to the people will insure his re-election which he so well deserves."

HOOVER BLOCKS
GIGANTIC WASTE

Halt of $4,500,000,000 in Expenditures Revealed By Textbook

President Hoover with the aid of Republican leadership has blocked Democratic attempts to pass measures appropriating $4,583,787,000, according to the Republican campaign textbook which is making its first appearance in Massachusetts this week. Copies of the document are being sent to strategic local headquarters by Chairman Amos L. Taylor of the state committee and National Committeeman John H. Ardson to provide the ammunition for the massed oratory that will carry the issues to the people between now and Nov. 8.

"Economy in governmental expenditures always has been an outstanding and fundamental principle of the Republican party," declares the chapter on this issue. "Never has this principle been more soundly and firmly emphasized as in the last session of Congress when Republican leaders, either through the veto power by the President or through exertion of pressure on Congress, blocked attempts by the Democrats to squander more than $4,000,000,000."

President Hoover has vetoed more money measures than any President since Cleveland, according to the textbook, which lists these bills that received his veto: A bill for $100,000,000 for government operation of Muskegon Shoals, putting the government into competition with private business.

A bill to extend disability presumption in the World War Veterans Act which would have cost the taxpayers $737,000,000 for the three years 1931, 1932 and 1933.

A bill to extend unnecessarily $10,000,000 in subsidies to state employment services.

A bill to pay unnecessarily $6,500,000 in Indian claims.

A bill to increase by $287,000 the pay of one class of federal employees at a time when workers in private industry were accepting salary cuts.

"Killed 'Pork Barrel'" The survey continues: "Through the pressure of President Hoover's leadership, the Republican Senate discarded in the last session alone, these proposals, which actually had been passed by the Democratic House of Representatives: "The Garner bill for expenditure of $1,200,000,000 in useless postoffices and government works. "The Patman bill to print $2,500,000,000 in soldier bonus stamps, a proposal tending to undermine our entire monetary system."

"A discriminatory and unsound bill for $30,000,000 for veterans' beneficiaries. "This constituted a Democratic program of extravagance which would have cost millions of dollars to the nation's tax bill. It will be difficult for the country to believe Democratic promises of economy."

"President Hoover cut budget proposals $369,000,000 for 1933. When it became clear this was not enough he called on Congress to slash $230,000,000 more. The Democratic controlled House reduced this to a bare $20,000,000. Republican leadership in the Senate finally brought it back to $150,000,000. Finally, near the end of the last session, the President vetoed a relief bill containing by-products of Democratic leadership that would have made a gigantic public pawnbroker of the federal government, demanded $100,000,000 in loans and wasted millions in pork barrel projects."

"Doctah" said a lady of color "is you gwine order 'Rastus' one o' dem mustard plasters ag'in to-day?"

"I think perhaps he'd better have one more," answered the doctor.

"Well, he says to ax yo' kin he have a slice o' ham wid it 'count it's a mighty pow'ful prescription to take alone."

Two friends were having an indignation meeting of their own. Both had suffered domestic strife and now they were comparing notes.

"Aren't women the limit?" growled the first. "Well, husbands don't know anything at all, and our wives know everything."

"Well," said his companion in misery reluctantly "There's one thing my wife admits she doesn't know."

"What on earth is that?" "Why she married me."
